

A Life-Changing Career

Medical Lab Technologist or Medical Lab Technician

Mayo Clinic Health System

Whether you're an experienced laboratory professional, a new graduate, or currently a student in the sciences, we invite you to explore the clinical laboratories within Mayo Clinic Health System (MCHS). Here you will be a valued member of an outstanding health-care team and will experience the exemplary environment of one of the world's leading health-care institutions.

MCHS Laboratories supports physicians at Mayo Clinic Health System by performing testing services for diagnostic and therapeutic evaluations in 70 communities throughout locations in MN, IA, and WI.

As an MCHS MT or MLT, you will perform tests on specimens in a generalist lab setting. You will troubleshoot assays, evaluate tests for accuracy, and provide operational support activities to optimize testing. You may work using highly skilled manual techniques or automated testing using sophisticated instrumentation. You will work independently and with other department members to provide efficient and accurate reporting of results. The work environment is fast-paced, allowing you to utilize your expert organizational and multitasking skills and to manage the pressure of time constraints.

QUALIFIED CANDIDATES WILL MEET THE FOLLOWING:

Medical Lab Technologist (MT) — Bachelor's degree in Medical Technology, Medical/Clinical Laboratory Science, or health related field. Completion of a clinical laboratory internship required. A HEW certificate may be substituted for the specified degree. Applicants with a bachelor's degree in a science or health related field with completion of a clinical laboratory internship or clinical laboratory experience will be considered in the appropriate field of study (i.e. Microbiology).

Medical Lab Technician (MLT) — Associate's degree from an accredited Medical Laboratory Technician (MLT) program or U.S. military Medical Laboratory-training program.
